“Painting Today to Preserve the Past for Tomorrow”

Wednesday, October 10th, 7:30 p.m., First Congregational Church
(Middle Entrance on Sanborn Street), Reading

Jeff Fioravanti describes how he derives his inspiration from scenes observed while traveling, walking or just being aware of his surroundings, often near his home. Jeff is an expressive realist painter who offers works of art that are not only representations of the subject but images of mood and feeling that entice and stimulate the viewer to make an emotional and personal connection to each piece. Pastel is his chosen medium to record what he considers his mission: To link the past to the present and the future.

Jeff has won numerous awards in regional, national and international juried and invitation-only exhibits and is included in Who's Who in American Art and Who's Who in America. He is currently exhibiting at Art Research Associates Gallery in South Hamilton; Art3 Gallery in Manchester, NH; and Gallery 30 in Gettysburg, PA.

Don't miss this stimulating demonstration. Bring some friends. As usual, delicious refreshments will be served.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Windy City Inspiration ♦ ♦ ♦

I am writing this from 33,000 feet, heading back to Boston after a short but productive mini-vacation in Chicago. Our main goals for this trip were seeing the Red Sox sweep the White Sox and exploring a city that we had never visited before. We loved the city. As an artist and former civil engineer I found Chicago to be a visual dream. The architecture was spectacular, and the Art Institute of Chicago was the finest I had ever seen. Their impressionist collection is the largest in the world. It was simply amazing to be face to face with so many famous paintings and to be able to photograph them. But the best part of the trip was yet to come.

If any of you have read "Alla Prima" by Oil Painting Guru Richard Schmid, you would have noticed that many of his portrait and figure paintings were created in Chicago at the famous "Palette and Chisel Academy of Art." My personal quest was to locate this famous place and to take some photographs of at least the outside. It turned out that the P&C was located within walking distance of our condo, and an opening artist's reception was being held on Friday night. The exhibit featured three P&C artists, all very accomplished, including Mary Qian, who is receiving national acclaim, as well as Lenin Delsol and George Zaremba. They showed wonderful portraits and figure paintings in both oil and watercolor. The building, which is owned by the P&C, is an Italianate Mansion, one of the first structures built after the Great Chicago Fire. The exterior and interior are stunning, with plenty of space for galleries, group and private studios, a coach house, and a secret garden.

I met the three exhibiting artists and quite a few others and told them about our Reading Art Association. I was invited to join them the next morning to participate in an open-studio sketch group. I couldn't believe my ears, but I quickly accepted, even though I had no supplies with me. No problem. They loaned me what I needed, and I found myself sketching with a new-found group of artist friends in an environment that felt like heaven. This was the first time that I had actually painted from life in a studio that was illuminated totally by north natural light. I'm not sure if it was the lighting, the surroundings or the history, but I proceeded to create a portrait study that exceeded my expectations. I'm going to blame it all on the P&C.

The plane will be landing soon, but I know I will be flying high for quite a while longer.

Our artistic season begins a new year in a couple of weeks with demonstrations by some of our artist members. Let's show our support and create an atmosphere of enthusiasm and inspiration. A little bit from each of us can achieve wonderful things.

Go Sox!

Tom
